Husch Blackwell Named Among BTI Consulting's "Most Feared" Litigation Firms 2027

National law firm Husch Blackwell was named one of the 22 most feared litigation law firms in BTI Consulting's 2027 litigation outlook.

The report is based on direct, unprompted feedback from more than 350 leading legal decision makers responsible for litigation across eight practice-specific categories: bet-the-company litigation, class actions, commercial litigation, cybersecurity, employment litigation, intellectual property litigation, product liability, and securities and finance litigation.

"Our litigation practice reflects the very best of Husch Blackwell: exceptional lawyers, deep industry knowledge and an unwavering commitment to our clients," said Jamie Lawless, Chief Executive of Husch Blackwell. "Whether the matter calls for a decisive courtroom strategy or a practical path to resolution, our litigators understand the stakes and deliver the sophisticated counsel clients expect when the pressure is highest."

The recognition comes on the heels of a Husch Blackwell litigation team discovering a secret document in a decade's long arbitration and multi-forum litigation on behalf of OptumRx that helped vacate a $48 million arbitration award.
