Husch Blackwell Adds Experienced International Trade and Customs Attorney to Washington, D.C., Office

Husch Blackwell welcomes Partner Robert Stang to its Washington, D.C., office. Stang will focus his practice in the areas of customs and international trade law, bringing 30 years' experience handling a diverse group of issues for importers including compliance matters and monetary assessments, supply chain security, classification, valuation and country of origin issues, special trade programs, Customs audits and legislative changes relevant to U.S. importers.

Stang most recently practiced customs and international trade law in the Washington, D.C., office of an international AmLaw 100 firm (2003-2013). Prior to that, he worked as a Senior Manager for the customs and international trade practice of Big Four accounting firm KPMG LLP in New York (2000-2003).

Stang received his J.D. from The George Washington University Law School in Washington, D.C. (1984) and his M.P.A. from Columbia University in New York (1984). He received his B.A. from The Pennsylvania State University (1978).

Husch Blackwell's International practice group provides clients with comprehensive legal services and expertise for all aspects of their cross-border pursuits, such as international import/export transactions, distribution arrangements, and distributorship and sales representation agreements, as well as acquisitions, divestitures and joint ventures. In addition to London, other areas of focus include Asia and Mexico, Central and South America. The firm's Customs & Trade attorneys provide guidance to manufacturers, distributors, retailers, technology companies, and foreign suppliers engaged in the import and export of goods, technology and services.
