Husch Blackwell's Ault and Mullineaux Receive 2019 Missouri Bar Pro Bono Publico Awards

Two Husch Blackwell attorneys will be honored with awards from the Missouri Bar Association honoring their pro bono efforts.

Jordan Ault has been named a recipient of the Missouri Bar Association's Pro Bono Publico Award by the Executive Committee of The Missouri Bar and Theresa Mullineaux has been named a recipient of the Pro Bono Publico Award by The Missouri Bar Young Lawyers Section.

Based in Jefferson City, Ault, a firm partner, focuses his practice on product liability and toxic tort cases. He also co-leads the firm's Nonprofit Organizations & Religions Organizations practice. St. Louis-based Mullineaux is a commercial litigation associate and a member of the St. Louis Cortex team, which helps startup companies navigate the legal environment.

The Missouri Bar presents its Pro Bono Publico Awards annually to attorneys who have rendered outstanding pro bono service to indigent or low-income persons in need of legal assistance. Ault and Mullineaux will receive their awards at The Missouri Bar Annual Meeting and Judicial Conference in Branson on September 18, 2019.
