

ARTICLES

PUBLISHED: MAY 9, 2024

Services

Higher Education

Public-Private
Partnerships (P3)

Industry

Education

Professional

CHUCK AMBROSE

WASHINGTON:

202.378.2300

CHUCK.AMBROSE@

HUSCHBLACKWELL.COM

2024 Project Perspectives - Higher Ed on the Brink: An Interview with Chuck Ambrose

The adoption of public-private partnerships (P3) in higher education is in part driven by dwindling traditional funding and the need for innovative campus infrastructure. These deal structures offer cost efficiencies, risk-sharing, and innovation by integrating private capital and expertise into project scopes. As higher education evolves, the scope of P3s is expanding to address sustainability, economic development, and distance learning. Read an interview with Husch Blackwell's Chuck Ambrose, who recently co-authored Colleges on the Brink, The Case for Financial Exigency, discussing the challenges and opportunities for P3s on campus.

Read full article >