2025 Project Perspectives: Exploring Trends and Developments in Alternative Project Delivery

Project Perspectives is Husch Blackwell's eighth annual report on alternative project delivery and public-private partnerships (P3s). This year, we have collected perspectives from across our law firm highlighting the challenges project owners, developers, and investors face in the planning, finance, construction, and operation of large infrastructure projects. Our report responds to the recent changes in law, public policy, and the macroeconomic outlook that potentially complicate project timelines and budgets. We hope our report is helpful to project stakeholders in managing the risks associated with large, complex infrastructure projects.

Our downloadable report focuses on these key areas:

Recent federal executive actions, rulemakings, and legislation that impact project delivery, operation, and maintenance

Emerging project types poised to take advantage of alternative project delivery and public-private partnerships

Tariffs and their impact on project delivery

Opportunities for alternative project delivery approaches to adaptive reuse projects
