Thomas Miller Selected to the Wisconsin Law Journal Intellectual Property Powerlist

National law firm Husch Blackwell is pleased to announce that Milwaukee-based partner Thomas Miller has been named to the Wisconsin Law Journal Powerlist for Intellectual Property law.

For 30 years, Miller, who is a member of the firm's Intellectual Property practice, has helped companies of all sizes protect their intellectual property assets, from early-stage product development through commercialization and corporate transactions. He routinely works with in-house patent attorneys to manage patent portfolios, advise on protection strategies, and maximize the value of their innovations. Miller has deep experience in building large intellectual property portfolios for innovator companies.

The Wisconsin Law Journal powerlists recognize attorneys who are leaders in the region. The Journal's editorial team made the final choices for this list based on stories published during the year, recommendations from attorneys across Wisconsin, and outcomes achieved in cases.
