OVERVIEW

Joshua Cole supports attorneys and clients in commercial litigation matters involving real estate, development, and construction disputes. He brings precision, organization, and calm execution to every stage of a case.

Joshua is known for his organizational skills, consistency, and ability to manage complex matters from discovery through trial. His background spans the in-house, academic, and public-sector legal environments, giving him a well-rounded perspective when navigating complex disputes. Attorneys rely on Joshua to maintain orderly files, manage deadlines, and prepare clear, well-organized materials that help legal teams focus on strategy.

Today, Joshua supports the firm's Commercial Litigation team within the Real Estate, Development, and Construction business unit. His work includes assisting with pleadings and discovery, coordinating depositions and hearings, managing document productions, and preparing exhibits, binders, and chronologies for dispute resolution proceedings.

Joshua earned his bachelor's degree in criminology with a minor in strategic, legal, and management communications from Howard University. Prior to joining the firm, he gained experience at Meta, Georgetown University Law Center, and the U.S. House of Representatives. Clients and attorneys value his professionalism, attention to detail, and steady follow-through.
