OVERVIEW

Caleb helps clients with real estate matters, including property transactions, leasing, and development.

Inspired by his family's experience in residential and commercial real estate, Caleb pursued law school with the goal of becoming a real estate attorney. Before law school, he worked as a project engineer on one of the country's largest solar farms, developing skills in project management, development, and collaboration. His experience at a financial services firm also gave him a strong foundation in finance and business that helps him understand clients' objectives.

During law school, Caleb found his work with the Law and Entrepreneurship Clinic particularly meaningful. Drawing on his family's entrepreneurial background, he valued the opportunity to advise local business owners on transactional matters and gained firsthand insight into the significant role legal counsel can play in advancing a client's business and personal objectives. This experience further strengthened his interest in real estate, where he is particularly drawn to guiding projects from initial planning through completion and observing their lasting impact on the community.

As a Husch Blackwell summer associate, Caleb handled a variety of matters before concentrating on transactional real estate work. He values the relationships he developed and the practical experience he gained through those projects.

Known for being dependable and easy to work with, Caleb brings attention to detail, strong communication, and a steady work ethic to every matter.
