OVERVIEW

Emily is a paralegal in Husch Blackwell's ToxicTort and Products Liability practice groups, bringing more than 16 years of experience in toxic tort litigation to the firm's clients.

Based in Kansas City, Emily leverages her deep understanding of complex, high-stakes litigation to support attorneys and clients through all phases of complex litigation, from intricate discovery to rigorous trial preparation.

Her robust legal background includes managing catastrophic personal injury and wrongful death cases, as well as serving as a prosecutorial support paralegal in major criminal trials for the State of Missouri. This experience gives Emily a well-rounded perspective on trial strategy and courtroom dynamics, helping her anticipate case needs and support defense teams effectively.

Dedicated to advancing her profession, Emily is an active member of the Kansas City Paralegal Association (KCPA). She enjoys working with KCPA's Litigation Section to assist in developing educational and professional development initiatives for the local legal community.
