OVERVIEW

Anthony focuses his practice on tax controversy resolution, product and professional services liability, and related insurance disputes.

Anthony works closely with a wide variety of product manufacturers, professional service organizations, healthcare organizations, and construction companies. For such clients he analyzes and addresses all forms of claims and suits involving tort liability, tax liability, commercial contracts, and insurance coverage. His representations of commercial and individual taxpayers focuses on property, sales and use, and income tax assessment disputes. His representation of manufacturing and service industry clients includes various forms of product and professional liability defense, construction defect litigation, and commercial contract disputes involving insurance and indemnification. In so doing he practices in multiple states, handling all phases of pretrial, trial, and appellate litigation in state and federal court.

Clients often communicate an appreciation for Anthony's unique background with a blend of insurance, tax, and liability litigation. It prompts practical and results-oriented strategy in risk management, focusing on keeping your resources and assets protected against claims and assessments. Anthony is a frequent lecturer to clients and trade groups on liability insurance, contractual risk management, and property and sales tax exemptions.

Featured Experience

Advocating for a client while keeping a family's tragedy top of mind.

When a 13-ton concrete panel fell from a wall in a Milwaukee parking garage, a teenager was killed and two others were catastrophically injured. The lawsuit that followed named a county among the defendants. Though Anthony represented the county in what he describes as the most complex case of his career in terms of tort, contract, and insurance disputes with a jury verdict involving nearly 50 questions, he never lost sight of what the families had suffered. After an eight-week trial, the jury found the county only two percent liable and awarded it $6 million in damages against the panel contractor; the families were awarded more than $18 million from the panel company.
