OVERVIEW

Lindsey represents clients in creditor- and debtor-side insolvency matters before state, federal and appellate courts.

Lindsey has represented Chapter 11 debtors in some of the largest, most complex reorganization cases filed in the State of Wisconsin in recent years, including the Archdiocese of Milwaukee and Cardiac Science Corporation. With her finance background, Lindsey views bankruptcy law as a complex intersection of finance, business and legal issues, and she handles client bankruptcy matters as such.

Lindsey also represents creditors and other parties-in-interest in bankruptcy cases, state court receiverships and litigation matters arising in a multitude of industries, including manufacturing, real estate and healthcare. Clients value Lindsey's broad experience working in all phases of insolvency matters for:

- Financial institutions
- Corporations
- Nonprofit organizations

Prior to joining the firm, Lindsey served as an intern for Justice Patience D. Roggensack of the Wisconsin Supreme Court.
