OVERVIEW

As a business-minded litigator, Brandon knows the importance of understanding not just the legal issues but the people and priorities behind each legal matter.

Brandon has successfully represented clients in complex litigation in state and federal courts across the country. He draws on a decade of experience from a broad range of business litigation matters with an emphasis on product liability and toxic tort.

Brandon works closely with in-house legal teams and business stakeholders to prevent disputes and resolve existing litigation. Through these relationships, he tailors strategies for each client to best protect their interests. Whether the right path is early resolution or trial, he understands the importance of allocating resources strategically. This approach helps businesses manage costs while achieving their goals.

Prior to his legal career, Brandon served five years in the U.S. Marine Corps as a linguist and led intelligence collection teams during deployments in Afghanistan.
