OVERVIEW

Kelvin provides clients critical strategy at a national level on matters of complex product liability and toxic tort.

Kelvin serves as national trial counsel and national coordinating counsel in state and federal courts from coast to coast. Kelvin has tried cases across the country and collaborates with medical, scientific and other subject-matter experts to assist clients in defending national portfolios of asbestos litigation claims. Kelvin's knowledge of medicine and science is broad and deep. He works closely with experts who are leaders in fields of pathology, pulmonology, industrial hygiene, epidemiology, immunology and genetics, and he has particular interest and knowledge in genetic-related cases and the science related thereto. Product manufacturers and distributors in construction, safety and automotive sectors are among those relying on his guidance. Kelvin has also argued in in the court of appeals on behalf of clients.

Kelvin's more than 25 years of extensive experience in trial, litigation and appellate matters includes catastrophic injury, environmental issues, product liability and toxic torts, including advocating for clients regarding regulatory issues before the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). Kelvin has experience with commercial litigation, contract disputes, leasing and construction defect disputes, real estate contracts, class action litigation, and trade secret and intellectual property matters.

Prior to making the United States his home, Kelvin practiced as a solicitor for the law firm of Freshfields, Bruckhaus, Deringer in London, England.
