OVERVIEW

With a natural curiosity that helps her ferret out every relevant fact, Anne represents clients in commercial litigation.

Anne knew she wanted to spend her career in an industry where she could help people, and she sees law as a truly client-centric profession. She chose litigation for the opportunity to solve clients' problems and regularly handles a wide variety of commercial matters, drafting pleadings, motions and discovery documents; analyzing legal questions; and counseling clients. Anne is known for her writing skills, which can set a case up for victory at the pleading stage, and for her enthusiasm for the investigative phase of trial preparation.

Thanks to her lifelong love of learning, Anne is especially passionate about investigating cases, digging for useful facts and piecing together winning arguments. She also enjoys learning as much as possible about client companies and their industries, and she places a high priority on understanding client needs.

Known for her excellent listening skills, Anne has a reputation for empathy: she knows how difficult litigation can be for companies and individuals, and she strives to make the process as painless as possible.
