OVERVIEW

Sophia defends business and real estate clients in complex commercial litigation, with an eye toward business goals and future needs.

Sophia was six years old when her father decided to start his own business, and she spent her life watching him build a successful enterprise from the ground up. She saw first-hand the hard work, energy and capital it took to make a business profitable and help it reach its goals. With a love for public speaking and advocacy, Sophia knew that she would become an attorney and help serve people just like her father.

A five-time regional and national moot court champion, Sophia developed her advocacy skills in law school, winning multiple best speaker and best brief awards along the way. She finds joy in advocating for clients and developing effective litigation strategies, as well as the fast pace of litigation and trial work. Most importantly, Sophia believes that a lawyer is very much a part of a business's team. She takes pride in her role on the litigation team, supporting clients in a way that serves their needs and matches their corporate values.

Sophia has been described as a juggernaut when approaching client problems: whatever the issue, she is ready to find a solution that serves the client's needs. She is a strategic attorney who plans precisely and meticulously, staying far ahead of the opposition. However, what clients value most is her personalized approach to their cases. Sophia cares deeply about clients and their businesses and aims to develop a personal relationship with each one, drawing on her own life experiences. Her goal is always to match her strategy to the client's goals and
