OVERVIEW

Meghan is a commercial litigator who focuses her practice on complex commercial litigation and insurance coverage disputes.

Meghan represents clients in complex litigation disputes in state and federal courts, as well as in alternative forms of dispute resolution. She has experience litigating contract disputes, insurance matters, and dealership terminations. Meghan has handled cases from beginning to end, including discovery, expert reports, motion practice, and hearings.

Meghan regularly represents clients in insurance coverage disputes, encompassing a wide variety of policy types and losses, including environmental liabilities, personal injuries, professional liabilities, and property damage. Meghan thrives on the complexity presented by insurance litigation and is enthusiastic about digging deep into case law and policy details. She loves to distill convoluted problems into easily-understood solutions.

Known as a diligent researcher who immediately dives deep into a client's business and legal questions, Meghan is always willing to go the extra mile. She never wants to miss a single point that might help in court, and she has a reputation with both clients and colleagues for knowing every detail about a case.
