OVERVIEW

Kyle represents businesses in commercial litigation and defends dentists in board investigations and disciplinary proceedings.

Kyle suspected litigation would be the best fit for him even before he entered law school. After earning his undergraduate degree, he worked as a technical support specialist at a software company, where he discovered how much he enjoyed working one-on-one with clients to solve their problems. He also loved learning and diving into new subjects, and litigation offered continual opportunities to explore new industries and new points of law.

Kyle's commercial litigation practice includes business-to-business contract disputes and commercial lease issues. He takes the time to understand each client's business and what a good outcome looks like for them, then builds a strategy around it.

Kyle also represents dentists before the dental board, handling subpoenas, preliminary investigations, and formal disciplinary hearings. His connection to the profession began in Honduras, where he regularly volunteered with a dental clinic. As outreach and education coordinator, he used his Spanish for patient triage and community outreach.

Known as a persuasive, skilled advocate, Kyle aims to connect with each client on a personal level and make sure they are satisfied with both the answers and the outcomes.
