OVERVIEW

Cody fights for clients in complex commercial litigation.

A fierce litigator with a diverse commercial practice, Cody represents businesses of all sizes in a wide array of matters that include contract and shareholder disputes; oil and gas litigation; products liability; construction, leasing, and real estate disputes; and other business litigation disputes. He has argued cases in both state and federal court and on appeal and has tried to verdict—serving as first chair and obtaining a directed verdict as early as his second year as an attorney.

Cody often takes a leading role in cases, drafting all pleadings, handling depositions, corresponding with both clients and opposing counsel, and taking a central role in trial preparation. His competitive nature makes him a perfect fit for litigation: he loves nothing more than achieving a win for clients, and he also understands that a win may look different in different situations. Cody's goal is to achieve the client's preferred result, whether that's a victory at trial or an efficient, favorable settlement.

Known for his analytical mind, Cody tends to spot the best argument early on in a case—and then targets his discovery work towards that argument. He also has a gift for thinking quickly on his feet, modifying strategies as necessary in a courtroom. A results-oriented professional with a strong work ethic, Cody is always ready to deliver for clients.
