OVERVIEW

Aubrey represents clients in complex commercial litigation matters.

Aubrey's interest in law began at a young age, inspired by her attorney father and her own knack for advocacy. Her passion was further ignited through high school speech and debate, where she discovered her love for framing oral arguments. She was drawn to the legal profession's problem-solving nature and the opportunity to help companies overcome obstacles and challenges.

As a law student, Aubrey excelled in moot court and was part of the Advanced Trial Team and Arbitration Team. These experiences allowed her to refine her oral advocacy skills and understand the art of persuasion. She was particularly drawn to her negotiation class and alternative dispute resolution courses, which taught her the importance of approaching each case with a resolution mindset.

Aubrey spent two summers as a summer associate at Husch Blackwell, where she was exposed to the fast-paced world of litigation. She worked on summary judgment motions, amended complaints, and reviewed depositions. Drawn to the complexity and diversity of issues in the commercial litigation practice area, she especially enjoyed the collaborative nature of the work.

Now a fully qualified attorney, Aubrey continues to focus on complex commercial litigation. She is excited to tackle the challenges that come with each unique case and is committed to finding the least contentious path to a favorable outcome for clients.

Known for her dependability and personability, Aubrey connects well with people, making her a highly effective advocate who is
