OVERVIEW

Patrick defends clients in mass tort and product liability litigation.

Inspired by a desire to make a meaningful impact, Patrick chose to pursue a legal career. He was drawn to the mass tort and product liability practice area due to the scale and significance of these cases. The complexity and high stakes involved in such matters were compelling, and Patrick's strong competitive streak made him a perfect fit for litigation, where he enjoys the challenge of developing winning strategies.

During law school, Patrick gained valuable experience at his university's innocence clinic, contributing to three exonerations. This hands-on work, including securing compensation for a wrongfully convicted client and participating in bond hearings, underscored the impact an attorney can have. As a summer associate at the firm, he worked on litigation-based assignments, drafting complaints and discovery requests and researching legal issues. These experiences, along with a judicial internship, helped confirm Patrick's passion for litigation.

Patrick is known as dependable and committed to seeing tasks through to completion. Clients can trust that their needs will be met with diligence and reliability.
