OVERVIEW

Abby focuses on labor and employment law.

Abby's journey to a legal career was driven by her background in public relations within the entertainment industry, where she developed a passion for client-centered work and for helping others during challenging times. Her PR experience also honed her skills as an organized and effective communicator, equipping her with the tools necessary to deliver comprehensive and clear client solutions.

During law school, Abby was actively involved in the board of advocates and participated in moot court competitions as both an oralist and brief writer. These experiences provided her with valuable hands-on litigation practice and the ability to tackle challenging legal questions. Abby also worked as a student clinician in the First Amendment Clinic, applying her knowledge to real-world issues related to student speech.

Abby's interest in labor and employment was driven by the field's practical nature and solidified during her time as a summer associate at the firm, where she worked on various projects, including preparing motions, conducting legal research, and participating in negotiations and hearings. Her judicial externship with the United States Court of Appeals further sharpened her research and advocacy skills. Today, she primarily works on employment litigation matters while also providing preventative counsel to clients.

Abby is known for her quick response to questions, organized approach, and ability to explain complex legal issues in an easily understandable manner. Her genuine interest in labor and
