OVERVIEW

Lucy is a seasoned real estate paralegal and registered lobbyist who supports complex land use, entitlement, and development projects for large-scale infrastructure clients.

With over ten years of experience, Lucy provides strategic support in acquisitions, local government permitting, and regulatory compliance. She excels at managing the intricate municipal regulations necessary to facilitate large-scale developments, most recently serving as a key member of the team advising on a multibillion-dollar, 1.2-gigawatt AI data center project in Abilene, Texas.

Clients and attorneys value Lucy for her proactive approach, attention to detail, and ability to streamline complex matters. Her background includes distinguished service with a U.S. senator, the Texas attorney general, and the U.S. Small Business Administration, granting her a unique perspective on government relations. This deep understanding of both public policy and private sector needs makes her an invaluable asset to the firm's real estate and development team, ensuring clients receive seamless, high-level advocacy throughout the development lifecycle.
