OVERVIEW

Erin defends clients in complex commercial litigation matters.

Erin decided to pursue a legal career after owning and operating a wedding photography business for 10 years. Erin saw firsthand the challenges and financial risks business owners face, and as an industry leader, she mentored wedding professionals navigating the intricacies of business ownership. Erin often connected her peers and mentees with attorneys and quickly realized she wanted to step into that advocacy role herself.

Erin's background as a small business owner taught her the importance of communication and trust, skills she brings to every client relationship. She was drawn to commercial litigation because she enjoys solving problems and helping companies when they need support the most.

During law school, Erin was named St. Louis University School of Law's top oralist and competed in the BEF National Moot Court Competition where she developed strong written and oral advocacy skills.

As a summer associate at Husch Blackwell, Erin assisted with ongoing litigation, prepared case files for discovery and trial, and drafted memoranda on insurance claims and settlement agreements. These experiences gave her a practical understanding of complex litigation.

Erin is personable, diligent, and responsive. She focuses on clear communication and works quickly to address client needs.
