

NEWS RELEASES

PUBLISHED: FEBRUARY 8, 2021

Husch Blackwell Ramps Up Washington, DC, Growth Plans

Services

Alcohol Beverage
Food Safety &
Regulation
Government
Contracts
Higher Education
International Trade &
Supply Chain

Industries

Education
Food Systems
Real Estate, Development, &
Construction

Professionals

MICHAEL J. SCHRIER
WASHINGTON:
202.378.2313
MICHAEL.SCHRIER@
HUSCHBLACKWELL.COM

KYLE J. GILSTER
WASHINGTON:
202.378.2303

Husch Blackwell's Washington, DC, office has welcomed several new attorneys to the firm since the beginning of 2021. The firm's recent investment in Washington spans multiple practice areas and speaks to the continued strategic importance of the Washington office to the firm's overall strategy.

Most recently, the firm's Washington, DC, office added Joy K. Gaslevic as senior counsel. Gaslevic comes to the firm from The Johns Hopkins University, where she served as that institution's Interim Vice Provost for Institutional Equity. She joins Husch Blackwell's Higher Education practice group and will focus on Title IX and civil rights matters, as well as the development of ethics and compliance programs and training for higher education clients. Gaslevic also spent 12 years with the Office of the Maryland Attorney General, primarily in its Educational Affairs Division.

Earlier this year, the Washington office added Michael Schrier as a partner to its Government Contracts team, as well as associate Tony Busch, who joined the firm's growing International Trade & Supply Chain group. The firm also welcomed two new associates based in Washington as part of its new associate class that began in January.

These 2021 arrivals punctuate the growth Husch Blackwell's Washington office enjoyed throughout 2020. The most notable additions last year included an expansion of the firm's Food & Agribusiness capabilities in Washington. The firm added Seth Mailhot and Adena Santiago as partners in February and September, respectively. Mailhot assumed leadership of Husch Blackwell's Food & Drug Administration (FDA) practice, where he handles a broad array of matters involving FDA-regulated products and services, including food, medical devices, pharmaceuticals, biotechnology, tobacco, radiation-emitting electronic products and cosmetics. Santiago provides comprehensive alcohol-related licensing, labeling and compliance advice to a broad client list, including hotels, restaurants, distillers, brewers, wineries, and distributors.

“Our firm has long recognized the importance of Washington to its ability to provide clients a comprehensive, full-service practice offering,” said Kyle Gilster, Husch Blackwell’s Washington office managing partner. “Our office has grown to over 30 attorneys, and we are always looking to add talented people across all of our strategic business units whose approach to client service and teamwork aligns with our own.”