

ALTERNATIVE FARMING & SUSTAINABILITY

At the beating heart of the current food systems revolution is the imperative to all at once feed the planet while saving it from environmental degradation and habitat destruction. As alternative farming and sustainability concepts continue to attract more and more capital, our team is focused on helping clients develop and market innovative solutions by crafting the legal approaches needed to overcome obstacles and identify ways to move businesses forward.

Our team represents both innovators and investors and is keenly aware of the risks that accompany new technologies and applied concepts. We are capable of digging into the science behind the innovation—whether it be the development of cultured meat and alternative proteins or the operational challenges of indoor farming—assessing the global legal and compliance risks, and providing answers to tough questions that touch on virtually all areas of concern, including securities law, marketing and advertising, intellectual property and licensing, and consumer safety and product liability.

Contact Information

Steven N. Levine
303.749.7265
steve.levine@huschblackwell.com
huschblackwell.com